University-level committees with no faculty members (or only faculty members with administrative status) are not included in this document. Charges of ad-hoc committees, when available, are also included in this document.

Unless otherwise noted a faculty member’s term on a committee expires on June 15th of the specified year. For example, if an individual’s term is expiring 2021, then that means the individual will serve on the committee through June 15th, 2021.

For updates and corrections please contact Saif Mehkari, the Chair of the Committee on Committees for the Academic Year 2019-2020.

List of Updates:¹

- Version 1.01 (30th January, 2020): Corrected membership for Richmond Scholar Steering Committee + the spelling of the Chair’s name. Updated the Committee on Committee membership to no longer classify the A&S rep as temporary. Added a student representative to Academic Committee for International Engagement.

Details:

Term: Through end of Spring 2020 semester (with extension if necessary).

Charge:

The Charge. The General Education Curriculum (GEC) at University of Richmond is the set of required courses that all undergraduates must pass prior to graduation and currently consists of two units of First-Year Seminars, up to four units of a Second Language (Com II) requirement, up to six units of Fields of Study courses, and zero-unit Wellness courses. After a year-long evaluation, the General Education Curriculum Review Committee determined that the current GEC is not well suited to teach essential skills, abilities, and perspectives for undergraduates, or to fulfill our university’s mission of preparing students “for lives of purpose, thoughtful inquiry, and responsible leadership in a diverse world.” While the structure of the curriculum is functional, the neglected GEC has become a list of boxes to check for students. The GEC contains redundancies and weaknesses in the instruction of writing, numeracy, and wellness. The General Education Curriculum Improvement Committee is tasked to carefully sculpt and reshape UR’s GEC to patch its gaps and bring coherence to the curriculum. Given the GEC’s central role in our students’ educational experience, a well-designed, intelligible, and intellectually ambitious curriculum can invigorate the university’s faculty and students and create a sense of purpose for the university that attracts prospective students.

The Product. Building on the suggestions and proposals outlined by the GEC Review Committee’s final report, the GEC Improvement Committee will prepare a revised general education curriculum proposal that addresses the shortcomings and incoherence of the current curriculum to present to the Faculty Senate.

The Process. The Faculty Senate will convene a General Education Curriculum Improvement Committee that includes faculty members from the School of Arts & Sciences, the Robins School of Business, and the Jepson School of Leadership Studies. A good faith effort will be made to constitute the committee by May 2019. This General Education Curriculum Improvement Committee is proposed to begin its work by May 2019 and end by May 2020 with an extension if necessary. The GEC Improvement Committee will identify its chairperson or co-chairs at its first meeting. The GEC Review Committee chairperson will make available all documents and data generated by the review during 2018-19, including the review’s final report. The GEC Improvement Committee should hold an organizational meeting soon after being constituted and preferably at the beginning of Summer 2019, and then meet regularly during Fall 2019. The Committee shall actively seek input from individual departments and programs, especially those that contribute to the General Education curriculum. The Faculty Senate requests that the Committee report back to the Faculty Senate on their work by December 2019, including sharing a draft framework of a proposed curriculum if available. A complete and detailed proposal should be presented to the Faculty Senate, relevant faculty governance bodies, administrators, and the university faculty during Spring 2020 for approvals (the committee should be prepared to spend more time shepherding the proposal, if necessary). If a new curriculum is approved, the GEC Improvement Committee should create a draft charge for a new committee responsible for implementing the new curriculum.

Membership: The committee membership will include four faculty from A&S, two from RSB, and one from Jepson; two students ex officio (one from Westhampton College and one from Richmond College); one ex officio representative of the Provost’s Office; one ex officio member from the Registrar’s Office; and one ex officio continuing member from the General Education Curriculum Review Committee.

Charge:
The Questions. The world is complex, multi-faceted, and changing at a rapid pace. Preparing the next generation to thrive in that environment, build robust communities, and solve major social and environmental challenges is critical for higher education. How do we nurture students who have the intellectual tools and practical skills to understand, adapt, and lead in turbulent times?
Creativity, innovation, and entrepreneurship (CIE) are an important part of the answer. We need to encourage students to develop the capacity to create new knowledge by drawing off time tested epistemologies in the humanities, sciences, fine arts and social sciences, as well as those in professional schools. Students must also learn how to innovate – to apply knowledge in new ways to address a variety of social and market needs. Finally, we must educate our students on entrepreneurship: how to take risks to establish effective and viable organizations in ways never imagined. What would a distinctive initiative in CIE look like at the University of Richmond that would significantly contribute to the capabilities of our students?

Why Now? CIE is not new – in some form it is what universities have always been doing for students. A number of things, however, are different, especially for liberal arts colleges, and they require a response. Here are a few:

- Pace of technological change
- Interconnectedness of societies and cultures
- Rapid transmission of ideas
- Growth rate of interdisciplinary fields and inquiry; combining liberal arts with professional schools
- Increase in the number of jobs/careers the average student will hold in a lifetime
- Leap in new methods in CIE – e.g., design thinking
- Explosion of social innovation/entrepreneurship as an approach
- Surge in student interest in CIE

The Competitive Landscape. As detailed in the attached report, many universities and colleges have programs in some portion of the CIE space. Entrepreneurship programs are most common. Typically, these are mostly centered in business schools with a few institutions having programs that extend meaningfully into other schools, most commonly, engineering. Most top tier liberal arts colleges have some sort of curricular or co-curricular offering in CIE; a smaller number have certificates. Almost none, including the top 25 national liberal arts colleges, have specialized majors or general education requirements.

The Opportunity. The University of Richmond has a number of strengths that make it well positioned to undertake a CIE initiative that can significantly add to the capacity and profile of the institution.

- Five schools – our national liberal arts peers do not have five schools to pull from in a distinctive mix that spurs multidimensional creativity and problem-solving. The School of Arts and Sciences provides vital knowledge in critical disciplines and well-developed styles of creativity from the humanities, social sciences, natural and applied sciences, and fine arts.
- The School of Business has an existing innovation and Entrepreneurship track, a Center for Innovation and Entrepreneurship, an iLab, and an emerging entrepreneurship minor. The School of Law has a certificate in Intellectual Property Law, an Intellectual Property Institute, a selection of relevant courses and a very strong IP faculty as well as a clinic that provides free legal assistance to local startups and entrepreneurs. The Jepson School offers a specialized and critical leadership frame on CIE. SPCS helps take CIE into the Richmond community and Richmonders’ talents into CIE.
- The size of UR offers an advantage in the tightness of linkages across our schools that are often lost or not made at bigger universities.
- The diversity of Richmond’s student body is a significant advantage in CIE: diversity enhances creativity, decision-making, and output. CIE would help leverage diversity and further inclusion as multi-perspectival groups work together on meaningful challenges.
- UR’s commitment to experiential learning and CIE would benefit each other.
- UR’s strength in Civic Engagement (CCE) would work well with UR CIE programs: “the most effective social entrepreneurship programs also appear to integrate existing campus centers for civic engagement or social justice.”
Richmond is a growth city for both business and social entrepreneurs, providing rich opportunities for two-way partnerships between community and UR.

UR is a national leader in global education, opening pathways to apply CIE initiatives in a broader context, potentially with “glocal” (e.g., Richmond or Virginia) dimensions.

CIE can take on wicked problems/grand challenges and encourage new enterprises that bring together scholars and students from across the university in semester or longer projects and/or courses, thus helping to weave a stronger community and identity.

The Charge. In the next six months, we want to explore how UR can best develop an outstanding program in CIE that distinguishes the University and its relative strengths, significantly advancing our mission to educate. Any proposal should:

1) Articulate what each school can usefully do on its own
2) What the schools should do together
3) Identify degree, certificate, co-curricular, and extra-curricular options
4) Outline any hiring desirable and the number and types of positions
5) Describe desirable facilities/space
6) Project rough budget numbers

The challenge is to determine what a distinctive CIE initiative should look like.

Ethics Initiative Committee

Faculty Representative: Jess Flanigan

Faculty Representative: Miriam McCormick
Faculty Representative: Richard Coughlan
Faculty Representative: Christopher Corts
Faculty Representative: Tom Shields.
Details:

Reports to: Provost’s Office (Contact: Sandra Peart)

Term: pending

Charge: The need:

At national and local levels and on college campuses, we find ourselves challenged by divisive times. These challenges make apparent the need for substantive discussions and training around ethical dilemmas. Ethics initiatives do not prescribe the answers but they can help students understand the moral issues at stake, talk about issues with intellectual sophistication, live lives of purpose and consequence, and assume positions of ethical leadership. In business, politics, science, law, and leadership, the need for an education in ethics is profound and employers increasingly recognize this need.

The University of Richmond will distinguish itself with an integrated approach across our five schools. There is no ethics initiative in the national landscape that has our strength and breadth. We can excel in preparing students to lead in professions that increasingly demand ethics training.

The committee charge:

In the next six months, we will assess programs in Ethics at the University of Richmond and explore ways to build on our existing strengths, significantly advancing our mission to educate students for lives of purpose and responsible leadership. The committee will:

1) Assess what is presently underway within and across Schools;

2) Identify options for additional ethics education, including
   - Curricular – Expansion of ethics courses and course sequences across the curriculum (add coherence to current course offerings)
   - Practice – Extension of programming to co-curricular
   - Outward-facing elements – Sponsored speakers, symposia, lectures, conferences, web presences, and other public elements;

3) Consider resource needs, including faculty and staff as well as facilities, and estimate costs.

Our Ethics Initiative will add a unique, 5 School twist to the ethics programs of other universities. We will take advantage of already existing strengths and put a distinctive UR stamp on such conversations.

First Year Experience Advisory Group

A&S: Della Dumbaugh
A&S: Shannon Jones
JSLS: Chris Von Reuden
RSB: Shital Thekdi

Details:
- Reports to: Provost’s Office (Contact: Scott Johnson)
- Term: Academic Year 2019-2020 (with a possibility of an extension)
- Charge: The ways in which Richmond students are introduced to the University, and the early experiences they have, can influence their retention, academic success, relationships with others, and affinity for UR.

In light of the recent strategic plan Forging Our Future, Building From Strength, the development of The Richmond Endeavor Quality Enhancement Plan, and the abiding desire to improve the student experience at the University of Richmond, the Executive Vice President & Provost and the Vice President for Student Development charge the First-Year Experience Advisory Committee with fulfilling the stated goal of the University’s strategic plan: to Develop a signature first-year experience that will immerse undergraduate students into our intellectual community and set them on a purposeful, ambitious path of inquiry and achievement in the classroom and in their personal development.

During Spring 2018, an initial First-Year Experience (FYE) Committee worked to define “the first year” (May 1st to May 15th), establish a set of overarching goals (labeled Adjustment, Community, and Transformation), and explore (with significant external input) the range of programs and possibilities that currently exist and/or could be implemented to create a signature first-year experience fitting for the University of Richmond. The integration of the full experience was of particular concern, and remains so.

A new FYE Advisory Committee is charged with supporting co-leaders Scott Johnson (from Academic Affairs) and Andy Gurka (from Student Development) as they move the FYEC-derived ideas and possibilities to actions. The FYE-AC will provide the insight and understanding necessary (pending all required approvals and with significant campus consultation) to support the creation of a fully revised first-year experience. This includes (but is not limited to), establishing a clear plan for the First-Year Experience and pursuing approvals and implementation of the elements of this plan (with a running timeline, an outline of relevant programs/initiatives, acquiring where possible requisite budget and staffing, and drafting assessment processes).

This FYE-AC will work for three semesters (through spring 2020), submitting progress updates each semester to the University Provost and the VP for Student Development. In 2020, Provost Legro and VP Bisese will, in consultation with committee members, revisit the need for the FYE-AC.

Health & Wellbeing Taskforce

- Faculty Representative: Laura Knouse
- Faculty Representative: Kathleen Skerrett
- Faculty Representative: Camilla Nonterah

Details:
- Reports to: Provost’s Office (Contact: Scott Johnson)
Term: Academic Year 2019-2020

Charge: As you may know, the University’s Strategic Plan, Forging our Future, Building from Strength: A Plan for the University of Richmond, calls for us to “create a comprehensive well-being initiative for students that would strengthen and align programs (e.g. student health, recreation and wellness, CAPS) that support both high achievement and a well-balanced life.” In response, the University has partnered with the JED Foundation. More specifically, the JED Campus program is a nationwide initiative of The Jed Foundation (JED) designed to guide schools through a collaborative process of comprehensive systems, programs, and policy development with customized support to build upon existing student mental health, substance abuse, and suicide prevention efforts. By becoming a JED Campus, a school demonstrates a commitment to the emotional well-being of its students. JED Campus schools embark on a multi-year strategic partnership with JED that not only assesses and enhances the work that is already being done, but helps create positive, lasting, systemic change in the campus community.

Over the course of their participation in the program, JED Campus schools receive:

- Support in the development of an interdisciplinary, campus-wide team that includes senior leadership to steer this work at their university
- An in-depth, confidential survey, at the beginning of the program and then again after three years, assessing mental health promotion and substance abuse and suicide prevention efforts
- Customized feedback reports created by JED’s clinical team after each survey identifying successes and opportunities for enhancement
- An onsite meeting with a JED expert to develop a strategic plan tailored to a school’s individual needs that will serve as a roadmap to implement enhancements over the course of the program Ongoing support from a dedicated JED Campus Manager who provides consultation, guidance, and resources to help each school achieve its goals
- Membership in a nationwide Learning Community – a network of JED Campus schools that share advice and experiences as well as presentations/discussions on specific topics of interest that emerge from JED’s work with JED Campus schools
- The JED Campus Program membership seal to signify the school’s commitment to student mental health

We would like to invite you to become involved in this initiative by joining an interdisciplinary taskforce that we are chairing. This taskforce will focus on our partnership with the JED Foundation and explore ways it can guide the University through the implementation of appropriate well-being initiatives, as well as facilitate improved monitoring of our current efforts. We anticipate this being a long-term commitment with rolling deadlines and committee turnover. Our initial request is that you be willing to join us through April 2019. Please utilize the voting buttons above or indicate in a reply to this e-mail whether or not you are available and willing to serve.

- Serving as mentors for students in various different programs (e.g. the Richmond Scholars program, etc.)
- Serving on standing groups related to academic honors (e.g. Phi Beta Kappa, etc.)
- Serving on pop-up committees related to campus events (e.g. Black History Month Committee, etc.)
